Abstract In the digital and Smart Machine age, dental technologies including digital camera, video, intra-oral scanners, CBCT, CAD/CAM, 3d printers, milling machines have been developed and are continually advancing. Smart machines are also used in the dental procedures. The digital tools and smart machines have many advantages and they can make up for the weaknesses of the analogue dental procedures. Especially in the diagnostic step and the intermediate stage of treatment they make it easy to diagnose the patient current situation, which are often neglected in the analogue dental treatment.
