Abstract	In the last 5 years radical changes have happened that require a big adjustment on how to better maintain and restore periodontal health. This seminar will build on the new classification to discuss how to build effective care pathways. It will critically assess the key findings of the EFP clinical guidelines that will be released next spring and discuss how to best implement them. Few developments will also be discussed mostly in relation to approaches on how to maintain severely compromised teeth and how to introduce in practice a periodontally driven implant placement concept.
